KEIZER, OR (KPTV) -

One Keizer park is getting major improvement, thanks to hundreds of volunteers and some creative students.

Volunteers gathered at Keizer Rapids Park on Friday to work on building the "Keizer Big Toy Playground."

Nearly 3,500 Salem-Keizer school kids helped design the 15,000 square foot playground.

The playground includes things like a dinosaur dig area and a rock climbing.

But the work is not done yet, crews said they still need more help building the structure.

"What we need right now is people. We've still got all day Saturday and Sunday. We have shifts available all day, skilled and unskilled labor, it doesn't matter we can put you to work if you have carpentry skills, but if you don't we'll still find something for you to do," said Brandon Smith, a volunteer.

They plan to open the park Sunday evening, with a full opening on Monday.
